Torty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a flete of Indian Air Force (IAF) helicopters flew an Indian Army platon, one soldier at a time, to the Bilafondia Pass on the Saltoro Ridge, towering over the Slachen Glacler at an altitude of 5,450 metres (17,880 ft.). Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who retired in 2016 as a fleuteniant general), the platono of hardy Kumanni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bilafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slachen Glacler and sealing off the approaches from Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir (POK) to Ladakh.

Simultaneously, a platon of Ladakh.

Simultaneously, a platoon of Ladakh Scouts was airlifted to Sia La, in the scouts was affilied to Sta La, in the northern glacier, at an altitude of 5,589 metres (18,336 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude operations, so they were given the higher objective.

Soon, about 500-odd Indian troops were positioned on the strategically important peaks and passes of the Saltoro Ridge. By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to dislodge them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

ered in the late 1970s that Pakistan was hosting European mountaineering expeditions on the Saltorn Ridge, thereby establishing its claim to those ranges. Persuading the Indian military and mountaineering hierarchy to establish Indian counter-claims, Bull Kumar led a team from the army's High Altitude Warfare School (HAWS) to climb the 23,400 feet-high Teram Kangri II in 1978. "During the expedition. I found signs of German, Japanesce, Pakistani and American expeditions. Pakistan had already sent about 50 expeditions," Kumar told hefore his death in December 2020.

"The IAH's incredible performance at the extremes of temperature and altitude remains a continuing sags of fortitude and skill. The IAH's Hunter aircraft kickstarted fighter operations from the high altitude airfield at Leh, when a detachment of Hunters from No 27 Squadron ommenced operations in September 984. In the next couple of years, the Hunters flew an impressive total of more than 700 sortics from Leh," stated the MoD on Saturday.

In the highest battlefield in the world, known for its extreme climatic conditions, IAF helicopters form the lifeline and the sole link of Indian troops with the outside world, playing a critical role in continuing the four decade-old military operation, responding to emergencies, supplying essential logistics and evacuating the sick and wannede from the 78 km iong glacter. Fiying in such mitheast terrain records ruthless terrain, records nuthless terrain, records of human endurance, flying and technical pro-ficiency are being set by the IAF nearly every day. Supplies would be dropped by AN-32 air-raff at our work decrease.

Supplies would be dropped by An-32 aircraft at one or two dropping zones on the glacier. They would scatter all over and it would alke a month to gather the crates and carry those heavy loads to the posts, which were as much as 14-16 kilometres away. There were some primitive snow scouters, but those were mostly non-functional, since soldiers had not learnt how to maintain them to keep them working in those temperatures. So, those heavy loads had to be carried up on the backs of soldiers.

Multiplying the difficulty were numerous creavasses everywhere, some so deep that there was no way of recovering someone who had fallen in. Since the opening would be hidden by a thin crust of snow, all movement was in groups of ten, roped together, so that if one man fell into a creavase, the others could dig their ice-axes and crampons into the snow and hold onto their comrade through the rope.

Narrow creaxses served as latrines, with men squatted over them, holding onto a rope. Every function was next.

nave been wounded. Large numbers of soldiers have been psychologically scarred.

Casually evacuation was by helicopter, but the small helicopters that could land on forward posts could only fly out with one casualty; it could not lift even a nursing assistant, or the bedding of the soldier being evacuated.

Home was a remote memory. In the days hefore posts were equipped with sarellite phones, letters were the only way to communicate and those often took 45 days to reach a forward post.

For India, it is a symbol of will and a suc-For India, It is a symbol of Will and a suc-cessful feat of arms. For Pakistan, it is a debacle, something to be wiped off the slate. For India, Slachen is a drain in terms of money and sheer military effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sore, draining honour and national pride. India tends to undervalue its Siachen adventage: this, must, be, evaluated.

India tends to undervalue its Siachen advantage. It is must be evaluated through Pakistani eyes. The enormous cost paid by India to gain the advantage in Siachen must translate into benefits elsewhere. Since the 1999 Kargil conflict, an entire Indian division now mans the InCG in Kargil, occupying areas almost as inhospitable as Siachen. A pullback from Siachen must be matched by a corresponding pullback from Kargil.

New Delbi, 1s April

orty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a fleet of Indian Air Force (IAF) helleopters fiew an Indian Army platoon, one soldier at a time, to the Bliafondia Pass on the Satoro Ridge, towering over the Slathen Glacler at an altitude of $5.450 metres (12,880 ft).

Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who, retired in 2016 as a fleutenami general), the platoon of hardy Kumaoni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bliafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slathen Glacler and sealing off the approaches from PakistanOccupied Kashmir (POK) to Jadakh.

Simultaneously, a platoon of Ladakh Scouts was attifiled to Sla La, in the northern glacler, at an altitude of $5.89 metres (18,336 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude operations, so they were given the higher oblective.

By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to dislodge them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

Thus began Operation Meghdoot Thus began Operation Meghdoot thus began Operation Meghdoot Thus began Operation Megndoot – India/sbold milliary response to what New Delhi calls Pakistan's "cartographic aggression" in the uncharted territory of Ladaki, north of map reference NJ9842, where New Delhi and Islamabad had agreed the Vinas (Control & Col'my Unit).

One of the key figures in the bold Indian decision-making of that time was Indian decision-making of that time was a colourful mountainese, Colonei Narendra 'Bull' Kumar. Ever ready to set off on an expedition, Bull Kumar discovered in the late 1970s that Pakistan was hosting European mountaineering expeditions on the Saltoro Ridge, thereby establishing its claim to those ranges. Persuading the Indian military and mountaineering hierarchy to establish Indian counter-claims, Bull Kumar led a team from the survey. High Altitude

"During the expedition, I found signs of German, Japanese, Pakistan and American expeditions. Pakistan had already sent about 50 expeditions," Kumar told before his death in December 2020.

When we were shopping for extreme cold mountaineering equipment in Europe, we discovered that the Pakistan Army was doing the same thing. That galvanised us into action," said Kumar.

Dominating the wasteland

Ower the decades, the Indian Army painstakingly learnt the game of high-alitude survival and combat. Captain Anill Sengar, who commanded a frontline post in the Northern Glacier in the 1980s described conditions to Business Standard.

"In the 1980s, before the current infrastructure was bull, soldlers sometimes didn't have tents to sleep in. They would fabricate makeshift sheliters from parachutes and the crates used for airdropping aupplies. Kerosene fuel was in short supply, being used in bukharis (iron stoves, with chimneys) to heat up shelters in which everyone, except for seriories, would crowd in to sleep. When the bukhari was put off, the temperature within the shelter would fall below zero in five minutes. And the wind would blow so fiercely that it would find even the smallest tear in the fabric of a shelter and fip it to shreds," said Sengar, who went on to become a major general. "In the 1980s, before the current infra-and np it to streets, said Sengar, who went on to become a major general. Playing an irreplaceable role in this effort, the IAF's tactical and strategic air-lifters – An-12s, An-32s and il-76s – transported stores and troops and air-drooped supplies to high altitude airfields, from where Mi-17, Mi-8, Chetak and Cheetah the limits set by the helicopter manufacturers.

"The IAF's incredible performance at the extremes of temperature and altitude remains a continuing saga of fortitude and skill. The IAF's Hunter aircraft kickstarted fighter operations from the high altitude airfield at Leh, when a detachment of Hunters from No 27 Squadron commenced operations in September 1984. In the next couple of years, the Hunters flew an impressive total of more than 700 sorties from Leh," stated the MoD on Saturday.

than 700 sortics rom Len, stated the MoD on Saturday.

In the highest battlefield in the world, known for its extreme climatic conditions, IAF helicopters form the lifeline and the sole link of Indian troops with the outside world, playing a critical role in continuing the four decade-old military operation, responding to emergence. in continuing the four decade-old mill-tary operation; responding to emergen-cies, supplying essential logistics and evacuating the sick and wounded from the 78 km long glacler. Flying in such runticss terrain, records ruthless terain, records of human endurance, flying and technical proficiency are being set by the LAF nearly every day. Supplies would be dropped by AN-32 aircraft at one or two dropping zones on the glaciter. They would scatter all over and it would take a month to gather the crates and carry those heavy loads to the posts, which were as much as 14-16 kilometres away. were some primitive snow scoolers, but those were mostly non-functional, since soldiers had not learnt how to maintain them to keep them working in those temperatures. So, those heavy loads had to be carried up on the backs of soldiers. Multiplying the difficulty were numerous crevases everywhere, some so deep that there was no way of recovering someone who had fallen in. Since the opening would be hidden by a thin crust of snow, all movement was in groups of ten, roped together, so that if one man fell into a crevasse, the others could dig their ice-axes and crampons

But Slachen can no longer be evaluated purely in millitary-strategic terms. For India, it is a symbol of will and a successful feat of arms. For Pakistan, it is a debacle, something to be wiped off the slate. For India, Slachen is a drain in terms of money and sheer millitary effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sone, draining honour and national pride. India tends to undervalue its Slachen advantage; this must be evaluated through Pakistani eyes. Since the 1999 Kargil conflict, an entire Indian division now mans the LOC in Kargil, occupying areas almost as inhospitable as Siachen. A pullback from Siachen must be matched by a corresponding pullback from Kargil.

Gunshots outside Salman's home

Two motolike-borne unidentified persons opened fire outside Bollywood superstar Salman Khan's house early Sunday morning leading the police to enhance security around his residence and launch a search for the accused, an official said.

The two persons fired four rounds outside the Galaxy Apartments in Mumbai's Randra area, where the actor resides, at around 5 am and fled from the spot, the police official said.

Security outside Khan's residence was stepped up and the police were collecting footage of the CCTV cameras installed near his house to identify the persons, he said.

Local police, crime branch personnel and a team of forensic experts reached the spot to collect evidence and started a probe into the incident, the official said.

orty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a fleet of Indian Air Force (IAF) helicopters flew an Indian Army platon, one soldier at a time, to the Bilafondia Pass on the Saltoro Ricaler at an altitude of 5,450 metres (I7880 ft). Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who relired in 2016 as a fleutenant general), the platon of hardy Kumanni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bilafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slachen Glacler and Sealing off the approaches from Pakistanbuatonia, scenning the strategic neights overhooking be Slachen Gloicer and sealing off the approaches from Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir (POK) to Jadakh. Simultaneously, a platoon of Ladakh. Scouts was airliffed to Sla La, in the northern glacier, at an altitude of 5,589 metres (18,356 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude operations, so they were given the higher objective. Soon, about 300°-00d Indian troops were positioned on the strategically important peaks and passes of the Salton Ridge. By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to disiodege them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

Thus began Operation Meghdoot – India/sbold milliary response to wha New Delhi calls Pasistani's Cardographic aggression' in the uncharted territory of Ladakh, north of map reference NJS942, where New Delhi alls Papar federence NJS942, where New Delhi and Islamabad had agreed the Line of Control (LoC) ranupto.

One of the key figures in the bold Indian decision-making of that time was a coloural mountaineer, Colonel Narendra Bull Kumar. Ever ready to set off on an expedition, Bull Kumar discovered in the late 1970s that Pakistan was hosting European mountaineering expeditions on the Saltoro Ridge, thereby establishing its claim to those ranges.

Persuading the Indian military and mountaineering interactive to establish Indian counter-claims, Bull Kumar led a team from the army's High Aktitude Warfare School (HAWS) to climb the 23,400 feet-high Teram Kangri II in 1978. "During the expedition, I found signs of German, Japanese, Pakistani and American expeditions. Pakistan had already sent about 50 expeditions," Kumar told before his death in December 2020.

"We began establishing a territorial claim to this area, through mountaineer-

"In the 1980s, before the current infrastructure was built, soldlers sometimes didn't have tenst to sleep in. They would fabricate makeshift shelters from parachutes and the crates used for airdropping supplies. Kerosene fuel was in short supply, being used in bukharis (tron stoves, with chimneys) to heat up shelters in which everyone, except for sentries, would crowd in to sleep. When the bukhari was put off, the temperature within the shelter would fall below zero in five minutes. And the wind would blow so fiercely that it would find even the smallest tear in the fabric of a shelter and rip it to shreds," said Sengar, who went on to become a major general.

Playing an Irreplaceable role in this effort, the IAF stactical and strategic air-lifters—An-128, An-328 and II. 786- transported stores and troops and air-dropped supplies to high altitude airfields, from where Mi-17, Mi-8, Chetak and Cheetah ing, to counter Pakistan's cartographic aggression," said Kumar. "My report on the expedition said, "The Line of Control should run along the Saltoro Ridge, so that we can overlook and dominate the Pakistania".

that we can overhook and dominate the Paskistanis."

"In 1983, the northern command intelligence concluded that Pakistan was preparing to occupy Slachen. When we were shopping for extreme cold moun-taineering equipment in Europe, we dis-covered that the Pakistan Army was doing the same thing. That galvanised us into action," said Kumar.

Dominating the wasteland

Dominating the wasteland Over the decades, the Indian Army painstakingly learnt the game of high-altitude survival and combat. Captain Anil Sengar, who commanded a frontline post in the Northern Glacier in the 1980s described conditions to Business Standard.

"The IAF's incredible performance at the extremes of temperature and altitude remains a continuing saga of fortitude and skill. The IAF's Hunter afteraft kickstarted fighter operations from the high attitude airfield at Leh, when a detachment of Hunters from No 27 Squadron commenced operations in September 1984. In the next couple of years, the Hunters flew an impressive total of more than 700 sortics from Leh," stated the MoDon Statute.

In the highest battlefield in the world, known for its extreme climatic conditions, IaF helicopters from the lifeline and the sole link of Indian troops with the outside world, playing a critical role in continuing the four decade-old mill-tary operation; responding to emergencies, supplying essential logistics and evacuating the sick and wounded from the 78 km long glacler. Flying in such ruthless terrain, records of human endurance, flying and technical proficiency are being set by the IAF nearly every day.

Multiplying the difficulty were numerous creavases everywhere, some so deep that there was no way of recovering someone who had fallen in. Since the opening would be hidden by a thin crust of snow, all movement was in groups of ten, roped together, so that if one man fell into a crevasse, the others could dig their ice-axes and crampons into the snow and hold onto their comrade through the rope.

Pakistan insists on terming it "the Siachen dispute", although the glacier itself cannot be seen, even from forward Pakistani positions.
But Siachen can no longer be evaluated nursely in militany-street terms.

But Stachen can no longer be evaluated purely in military-strategic terms. For India, it is a symbol of will and a successful feat of arms. For Pakistan, it is a dehacle, something to be wiped off the slate. For India, Slachen is a drain in terms of money and sheer military effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sore, deviated before the desired production of the state of the successful production of the successful produ effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sore, draining honour and national pride. India tends to undervalue its Siachen advantage: this must be evaluated through Pakistani eyes. The enormous cost paid by India to gain the advantage in Siachen must translate into benefits elsewhere. Since the 1999 Kargil conflict, an entire Indian division now mans the LOC in Kargil, occupying areas almost as inhospitable as Siachen. A pullback from Siachen must be matched by a corresponding nullback from Kargil. responding pullback from Kargil

AM SHUKA
Mew Debhi, 14 April

Torty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a Rete of Indian Air Force (IAF) helicopters flew an Indian Army plation, one soldier at a time, to the Bilafondia Pass on the Saltoro Ridge, towering over the Slachen Cjacler at an altitude of 5,450 metres (17,880 f).
Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who retired in 2016 as a lieutenant general), the platono in fardy Kumaoni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bilafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slachen Glacier and sealing off the approaches from PakistanOccupied Kashmir (POK) to Ladakh.
Simultaneously, a platon of Ladakh Scouts was airlifted to Sla La, in the northern glacier, at an altitude of 5,589 metres (18,336 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude optations, so they were given the higher objective.
Soon, about 300-odd Indian troops were positioned on the strategically important peaks and passes of the Saltoro Ridge. By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to dislodge them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an Invaluable tactical advantage.
Thus began Operation Meghdoot –

One of the key figures in the bold Indian decision—making of that time was a colourful mountaineer, Colonel

Persuading the Indian military and Persuading the Indian military and mountaineering hierarchy to establish Indian counter-claims, Bull Kumar led a team from the army's High Altitude Warfare School (HAWS) to climb the 23,400 feet-high Teram Kangri III in 1978. "During the expedition, I found signs of German, Japanese, Pakistani and American expeditions, Pakistani and American expeditions," Rakistani and American expeditions, Pakistan had already sent about 50 expeditions," Kumar told before his death in December 2020.

"We began establishing a territorial claim to this area, through mountaincer-

When we were shopping for extreme cold mountaineering equipment in Europe, we discovered that the Pakistan Army was doing the same thing. That galvanised us into action," said Kumar.

ating the wasteland

"In the 1980s, before the current infrastructure was built, soldlers sometimes diair have terms to aleep in. They would fabricate makeshift shelters from parachutes and the crates used for airdropping supplies. Kerosene fuel was in short supply, being used in bukharis (iron stores, with chimneys) to heat up shelters in which everyone, except for sentries, would crowd in to sleep. When the bukhari was put off, the temperature within the shelter would fall below zero in five minutes. And the wind would blow so fiercely that it would find even the smallest tear in the fabric of a shelter and rip it to shreds," said Sengar, who went on to become a major general. Playing an irreplaceable role in this effort, the IAF's tactical and strategic air-lifters—An-128, An-328 and Il-76s - transported stores and troops and air-dropped supplies to high altitude airfields, from where Mi-17, Mi-8, Chetak and Cheetah Over the decades, the Indian Army painstakingly learnt the game of high-altitude survival and combat. In the highest battlefield in the world,

In the highest batteried in the word, known for its extreme climatic condi-tions, IAF helicopters form the lifeline and the sole link of Indian troops with the outside world, playing a critical role in continuing the four decade-old mili-tary operation; responding to emergen-cies, supplying essential logistics and exacurating the sick and wounded from the 78 km long glacler. Flying in such ruthless terrain, records of human endurance,

There were some primitive snow scooters, but those were mostly non-functional, since soldiers had not learnt how to maintain them to keen them working in those terms. them to keep them working in those tem-peratures. So, those heavy loads had to be carried up on the backs of soldiers. Multiplying the difficulty were numerous crevasses everywhere, some

For many Indians, Stachen is a quixotic contest that occasionally garners world records like the highest battlefield ever or the world's highest heliopter landing. But for Pakistan, especially the Pakistani army, the humiliation of Siachen resonates. Many see Siachen as a violation of the Shimina Accord that says that "nel-ther side shall unilaterally alter the situation", with regard to "any of the problems between the two countries". For Pakistan, Aragil was a justifiable response to Siachen.

Within the Pakistani army Slachen is a militude popular in the Indians dominating the glacier from the Saltono. Pakistan insists on terming it "the Slachen dispute", although the glacier from the Saltono. Pakistan insists on terming it "the Slachen dispute", although the glacier itself cannot be seen even from forward Pakistani positions.

But Slachen can no longer be evaluated purely in military-strategic terms. For India, it is a symbol of will and a successful feat of arms. For Pakistan, it is a debade, something to be wiped off the slate, For India, Slachen is a drain in terms of money and sheer military effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sore, draining honour and national pride. India tends to undervalue its Slachen advantage; this must be evaluated through Pakistani eyes. The enormous cost paid by India to gain the advantage in Slachen must translate into benefits elsewhere. Since the 1990 Kavell conflict.

Gunshots outside Salman's home

Two motolike-borne unidentified persons opened fire outside Bollywood superstar Salman Khan's house early Sunday moming leading the police to enhance security around his residence and launch a search for the accused, an official said.

The two persons fired four rounds outside the Galaxy Apartments in Mumbai's Randra area, where the actor resides, at around 5 am and fled from the spot, the police official said.

Security outside Khan's residence was stepped up and the police were collecting footage of the CCTV cameras installed near his house to identify the persons, he said.

Local police, crime branch personnel and a team of forensic experts reached the spot to collect evidence and started a probe into the incident, the official said.

Rajesh Monga wanted a home loan and was considering the various options available. The officials of Housing Development Finance Corporation (HDFC) told Mongath at the rate of Interest would fluctuate as it would be governed by the Pinel-Lending Rate (PLR) Red by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI), HDFC asto sent an emant giving a comparative chart to convince Monga that its rate was better than what some other lenders were offering. On the basis of representations made, Monga opted for HDFC and availed a loan of ₹3.5 crore, which was disbursed to builder DLF Universal in Instalments between January 2006 and December 2007. Prior to the disbursal of the loan, an agreement was Rajesh Monga wanted a home loan

John agree 2017. Prior to the disbursal of the loan, an agreement was executed between Monga and HDPC, which stated that the loan was being sanctioned at 725 per cent per annum. This rate would be adjustable depending on its own PEL.

HDPC revised the rate of interest to 8.25 per cent even though RBI had not made any change in the PLR. He represented to the bank that higher interest was being levied, which was inconsistent with the terms of the contract. However, no relief was granted. On the contrary, the interest rate was later hiked to 8.75 per cent, then to 9.25 per cent, without any corresponding to 10.5 per cent, without any cent, then to 9.25 per cent, and finally to 10.5 per cent, without any corresponding change in the RBFs PLR.

Aggrieved, Monga had a legal notice issued to HDFC. He demanded a refund of the interest charged in excess of the agreed rate of 75 per cent per annum. The lender replied that the loan was issued with nance with HDFCs own retail lending rate.

Monga filed a complaint before the National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission, challenging the imposition of a higher rate of interest. The Commission noted that the crux of the dispute was whether an adjustable rate of interest would apply only when the rate of interest was altered by the RBI or whether it could be altered by IIDFC when it revised its own retail lending rate. The Commission observed that HDFC

The Commission observed that HDPC is a non-hanking financial company and not a bank. So, it would be entitled to frame its own policies with regard to lending and recovery. It further noted the agreement defined "adjustable rate of interest" as the rate which would be announced by HDPC from time to time as its retail prime lending rate. So, the commission concludes that HJPC had the right to ryols the interest rate based the right to ryols the interest rate based as its retail prime lending rate. So, the Commission concluded that HIPPC has the right to revise the interest rate based on its own retail lending rate, regardless of the PLR fixed by the RBI.

As regards the preloan correspondence, the commission observed that it would not be relevant as Monga was educated and had entered into a contract that was unambiguous and clear about the manner of leving the interest. The National Commission dismissed Monga's complaint, who then appealed to the Supreme Court (SC).

Supreme Court (SC).

The apex court observed that there was no misrepresentation in the pre-loan correspondence and endorsed the view correspondence and endorsed the view that the correspondence exchanged between the parties cannot override the contract executed subsequently, It also confirmed that HDFc, a finance company, was entitled to formulate its own policy. The SC concluded that, Monga could not be allowed to question the interest rate after having acquiesced by signing the loan argement. Accordingly, signing the loan agreement. Accordingly, by its order of March 4, 2024, delivered by Justice A S Bopanna for the Bench along with Justice M M Sundresh, the SC dismissed Monga's appeal.

Unhappy with your non-linked policy? Consider early surrender

But if you have held it for long, run the numbers; continuing may be prudent

In December 2023, the Insurance Regulatory and Development an exposure draft on the surrender value of non-linked insurance policies. Had those proposals been implemented, they would have made surrendering of life insurance policies less painful for policyholders.

The guaranteed surrender value (GSV) rates that apply to non-linked policies from April 1, 2024 (see box) have not changed. "The regulator has maintained the status quo on rates," says Abhishek Kumar, a sebi-registered investment advisor (RsIA) and founder, SahajMoney. According to Atok Runga, managing director (MD) and chief executive officer (CEO). Future Generall India Life Insurance Company, "The revised surrender value guidelines issued by Irdai are a relieration of the regulator's intent to ensure that customers say invested in life insurance policies for the long term." These GSV will be lower than if he surrenders its policy before it completes three years, the GSV will be lower than if he surrenders it between the fourth and the seventh policy year," says Naval God, CEO, PolicyX.

Insurers' perspective

Insurers' perspective
An insurance company creates long-term liabilities for liself upon selling non-linked, traditional plans (money-back and endowment). To meet them, it creates long-term assets by investing in long-tenure instruments, usually government securities and equities. When a customer surrenders the policy, the insurer has to unwind these investments and could have to take losses if interest rates are up or equity markets are not doing well. Insurers argue that making surrendering of policies paintess and easy would lead to an assert-lability mismatch for insurers.

"With a significant portion of insurance plans invested in long-term assess such as long-term bonds and equities, immediate surrender would necessitate insurers to maintain more fluidity, immediate surrender would necessitate insurers to maintain more fluidity, insurers to maintain more liquidity, requiring investment in short-term assets instead. This would ultimately impact the maturity returns of customers, says Tarun Chugh, MD & GEO, Halpl Alliant, Life.

Adds Rungta: "Higher surrender costs in the initial years deter the temptation to withdraw while ensuring that insurance providers are able to service these policies effectively without affecting their bottom line."

Insurers plan to modify their product mix. "A separate set oproducts is expected to be launched with higher surrender values than the minimum required, which will cater to customers seeking higher liquidity, abeli with slightly lower maturity returns," says Chugh.

Customers get a bad deal

The pollcyholder always takes a loss under this GSV regime. "For however long a policy is held, the policyholder never gets the entire premium back, forget about a return on the total premium amount," says Harsin Roonga, sebi-registered investment advisor (RIA) and principal officer, Fee Only Investment Advisors. They only get 90 per cent of total premiums back even in the last couple of years of the policy term.

Insurers pay a special surrender value, but that is not guaranteed and depends on a host of factors.

Financial advisors disagree with incurers' argument about having to unwind long-term investments. "The asset-liability mismatch argument does not hold since insurers create long-term assets based on their past experience of surrenders. Hence, there is no excess long-term investment that needs to be unwound," says Roongas.

Insurers also argue that it takes a lot of effort to sell a policy, due to which they have to pay high upfront commissions to agents. These costs need to be deducted when a policy is surrendered. Threestment products from all other regulators have moved to rail commissions, which in turn prevents mis-selling," says Roongas.

Issue of low persistency

Issue of low persistency

Persistency ratio is the percentage of the total number of policies or premium amount that remains in force from inception to various periods. On average, after five years, the number of life insurance policies in force drops to around half.

A major reason for low persistency is mis-selling. When customers realise they have been sold an unsuitable policy, they exit. "When an exit happens, whether early or late in the tenure, at no point does the insurer, agent, distributor or bancassurance partner suffer a loss. The only party that ends up paying a heavy price owing to the high surrender charges is the customer," says Roongta.

Enter with caution

Avoid mixing insurance and investment. "Any product that pays a commission as high as 35 per cent in the first year to the agent or the distrib-utor cannot be good for the customer," sate Paonetts.

ulto ramnot be good for the customer," says Roongta.

Most traditional plans have an a internal rate of return (IRR) between 4 and 6 per cent. These are low returns for a 20 to 30-year product.

"The only class of customers who may perhaps invest in these plans is the financially non-savy ones who have so far invested only in real estate and gold. Such customers are othen faried oftosing money in the financial markets. For them the safety of instrance products is a big pull, says Ravi Saraogi, co-founder, Samashith Advisors.

The resi, who are either financially savy or have access to good advice, may avoid them.

When should you surren

When should you surrender?
Policyholders in the early part of the policy tenure, who feel they have made the wrong choice, should exit despite the considerable loss.
"Pollcyholders must overcome the sunk cost fallacy and surrender these policies sooner rather than later," says Kumar.
Adds Saraogi: "If you have been in the policy for three to five years, take the loss and cold. Once you have crossed the seven- or 10-year mark, get an informed person to calculate the proson continue servicing the policy."

Kerosene fuel was in short supply, being used in bukharis (fron stoves, with chimneys) to heat up shel-ters in which everyone, except for sen-tries, would crowd in to sleep. When the bukhari was put off, the temperature within the shelter would fall below zero in five minutes. And the wind would blow so fiercely that it would find even the smallest tear in the fabric of a shelter and rip it to shreds," said Sengar, who went on to become a major general. Playing an irreplaceable role in this effort, the IAP's tactical and strategic air-litters – An-128, An-32s and II-78s – trans-ported stores and troops and air-dropped supplies to high aitfude airfields, from where Mi-17, Mi-8, Chetak and Cheetah

Since the opening would be hidden by a thin crust of snow, all movement was in groups of ten, roped together, so that if one man fell into a crevases, the others could dig their ice-axes and crampons into the snow and hold onto their comrade through the rope.

Dominating the wasteland

Over the decades, the Indian Army painstakingly learnt the game of high-altitude survival and combat. Captain Anil Sengar, who commanded a frontline post in the Northern Glacier in the 1980s described conditions to Bustness Standard.

orty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a fleet of Indian Air Force (IAF) helicopters flew an Indian Army platon, one soldier at a time, to the Bilafondia Pass on the Saltoro Ridge, towering over the Slachen Clacler at an altitude of 5,450 metres (17,850 n). Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who retired in 2016 as a Bleutenant general), the platon of hardy Kumaoni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bilafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slachen Glacler and sealing off the approaches from Pakistan-

Simultaneously, a platoon of Ladakh.
Souts was airlifted to Sia La, in the northern glacler, at an altitude of 5,589 metres (16,336 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude operations, so they were given the higher objective.
Soon, about 3000-odd Indian troops were positioned on the strategically important peaks and passes of the Saltoro Ridge. By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to dislodge them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

New Delhi, is April

orty years ago, on April 13, 1984, a fleet of Indian Air Force (IAF) helicopters flew an Indian Army platoon, one soldier at a time, to the Bilafondia Pass on the Salachoro Ridge, towering over the Siachen Glacier at an altitude of $5.450 metres (17.880 ft).

Led by Captain Sanjay Kulkarni (who retired in 2016 as a fleutenant general), the platoon of hardy Kumaoni soldiers quickly occupied the area around Bilafondia, securing the strategic heights overlooking the Slachen Glacier and sealing off the approaches from Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir (POK) to Jadakh.

Simultaneously, a platoon of Ladakh Scouts was airifiked to Sia La, in the northern glacier, at an altitude of $5.89 metres (I8,336 ft). These natural mountain troops were even better acclimatised for high altitude operations, so they were given the higher objective.

Soon, about 500-odd Indian troops were positioned on the strategically important peaks and passes of the Saltoro Ridge, By the time the Pakistan Army reacted by sending its troops to dislodge them, Indian soldiers had already occupied crucial peaks and passes, snatching an invaluable tactical advantage.

Multiplying the difficulty were numerous crevasses everywhere, some so deep that there was no way of recovering someone who had fallen in. Since the opening would be hidden by a thin crust of snow, all movement was in groups of ten, noped together, so that if one man fell into a crevasse, the others could dig their lee-axes and crampons into the snow and hold onto their comrade through the rope.

Narrow crevasses served as latrines, with men squatted over them, holding onto a rope. Every function was performed under the threat of enemy artillery fire. Shelling was a constant fact Kensene fuel was in short supply, being used in bukharis (tron stoves, with chimneys) to heat up shelters in which everyone, except for sentries, would crowd in to sleep. When the bukhari was put off, the temperature within the shelter would fall below zero in five minutes. And the wind would blow so fiercely that it would find even the smallest tear in the fabric of a shelter and rip it to shreds," said Sengar, who went on to become a major general. UNDERGOING FLIGHT TRIALS IN SIACHEN, WHERE IT WILL BE USED TO SUPPORT INFANTRY UNITS

Within the Pakistani pal III. BE army Slacknet is a mili-tary sethack with the fluidians dominating the fluidians of terminating to the Slacknet dispute, although the glacier itself cannot be seen, even from forward Pakistani positions.

But Slacknet can no longer be evaluated ourcely in military-stracetic terms.

But Siachen can no longer be evaluated purely in military-strategic terms. For India, it is a symbol of will and a successful feat of arms. For Pakistan, it is a debade, something to be wiped off the slate. For India, Slachen is a drain in terms of money and sheer military effort. In Pakistan, it is an oozing sore, draining honour and national pride. India tends to undervatue its Siachen advantage; this must be evaluated through Pakistani eyes. The enormous cost paid by India to gain the advantage in Siachen must translate into benefits elsewhere. Since the 1999 Kargil conflict, an entire Indian division now mans the LOG in Kargil, occupying areas almost as inhospitable as Siachen. A pullback from Siachen must be matched by a corresponding pullback from Kargil.
